WINNING.

It takes a little courage And a little self-control, And some grim determination If you want to reach a goal. It takes a deal of striving, And a firm and stern set chin, No matter what the battle, If you're really out to win.

There's no easy path to glory, There's no easy road to fame, Life, however we may view it, Is no simple parlor game. But its prize call for fighting, For endurance and for grit, For a rugged disposition And a "don't-know-when-to-quit."

You must take a blow or give one, You must risk and you must lose, And expect that in the struggle You will suffer from a bruise. But you mustn't wince or falter, If a fight you once begin, Be a man and face the battle— That's the only way to win.

—Detroit Free Press.

ROOSEVELT AND LA FOLLETTE.

Who is to be the leader of the insurgents, Roosevelt or La Follette? Everybody knows that, when Mr. Roosevelt was in Africa and the row with Pinchot began, people commenced to inquire whether upon his return their author would not denounce so radical a departure from what his followers called the Roosevelt policy. All close observers of national politics know that La Follette started the insurgent movement of which Roosevelt assumed the command. It is noteworthy that in his New York campaign only 500 persons were present in the immense Carnegie Hall which holds many times that number. It is his popularity among the people and in his home state, certainly La Follette continues to be highly thought of in his bailiwick. He is a declaration in the Wisconsin platform: "It is now recognized throughout the country that Robert M. La Follette was the pioneer in this progressive movement, and although he had behind him years of sound, progressive work, tried and approved in this state, when he entered the United States senate he had no other supporters nor followers. With the courage, ability and determination that has characterized all his public services he adhered to his course, rose to leadership, and now holds a position of undoubted power and influence in the nation. The people of Wisconsin believe the results secured promise opportunity for great achievements, and they have by an unprecedented majority expressed their faith in his wisdom and statesmanship and approved his re-election to the United States senate."

There is only one objection to La Follette, that is the party he belongs to. It is true he is sincerely trying to reform the Republican party, but he ought to be platform enough to see that this is an impossible task, as impossible as it would be for a naturalist to attempt to change the skin of an Ethiopian or the spots of a leopard.

But there is another objection to Theodore Roosevelt besides the formidable one, should he, as seems probable, become a candidate in 1912, of the third term precedent set by Washington, and that is that he has been one Roosevelt in the West and quite another Roosevelt in the East. On the Atlantic side of the Alleghenies if not quite a standpat he has at any rate indulged in talk, while on the Pacific side he ignored him. In one section of the country he came out squarely for tariff revision, elsewhere, on the advice of a commission, but in another section he failed to condemn the Aldrich-Payne tariff of abominations, but on the contrary commends it in the regular Republican way just as Taft does with a misleading condition. Does Roosevelt's politics vary when he replaces the slosh of the plains for the silk hat of Broadway. At Ocasawatomie he preached the new nationalism as the up-to-date political gospel, but at Saratoga, in speeches and platform, the new nationalism had vanished. In the Western wilderness Roosevelt is an earnest and right-minded man, but when he gets back into his native element he seems to hunger after the new sort of capital, the juggling of the money down the wall, the money, the money, the money in the Wall street atmosphere whirling off his inspiration. In the West he is a prophet, but when the wind blows westerly he knows a hawk from a handaw and who furnish the Republican campaign coffers with the silver of war.

La Follette ought to be a Democrat. If the West has its way he will be the insurgent. But there is always the danger of Roosevelt's charming, liberal again, and then in a general roundup the insurgent Mavericks will be lost in the Republican herd and there will be Machiavellian mirage at 26 Broadway—Houston Chronicle.

UNDER WORLD'S BIGGEST TENT.

Forpaugh and Sells Circus Has Complete Garden of Zoology.

Every representative of strange wild animal life is to be found this season under the mammoth tent of the Adam Forpaugh and Sells Bros' Big United Shows which are to exhibit in Greenville on Thursday, Nov. 3. The collection cost over $100,000 and it is a veritable open-air museum of natural history.

In remodeling the show for the season of 1910, the circus sold every one of its menagerie animals to various small shows throughout the country, and secured thousands of a complete new display. There are animals to be found there that never before have been placed on exhibit on grounds in any of America's cities. In addition to the various animals with which the public is familiar, there are to be seen such strange creatures as yak, yak, jaguar, zebu, hyena, gnu, antelope, ostrich, llama, yak, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, emu, wart hog and giraffe. As far as elephants are concerned, this circus has more than any other. This can also be said of the rhinoceros, dromedaries, zebras and the many varieties of the cat, bear and deer tribe.

The management has also introduced a new feature to its menagerie department in the shape of uniformed attendants who explain many wonderful things concerning the various displays and give practical demonstrations of strange facts. Usually spectators are afraid to ask questions of the attendants of a circus menagerie for fear of discourteous replies, but not so with this circus. Attendees are laid to answer all questions and they like pleasure in doing so.

A great deal of interest is added to a strange animal when there is some one at hand to explain its peculiarities. For instance, to the ordinary spectator a giraffe is merely a tall animal, twenty or so feet tall, spotted, one-necked and much out of proportion. But he becomes vastly more interested when there is a keeper who tells him that after all his long neck and long legs are no longer than his hind legs, and to tell you that he can go longer than a camel without food and drink, that he has no vent organs and can utter no sound, and that all or nearly all his food must be imported from Africa.
